

Lisa Weldon Lubin was born in St. Croix (U.S. Virgin Islands) and moved to Canada at the age of three. She comes from a long line of family musicians and music lovers. As a young child, with her sister Lori Weldon, Lisa was involved with the Metropolitan Music Theatre in Toronto, where she had the opportunity to work with and perform with many Canadian opera singers. Lisa attended Laura Secord Secondary School where she participated in chamber choirs, bands and orchestras. She plays several musical instruments, and began playing the steel drum at age 18 as a means of staying connected to her culture. She currently plays with a small band called Pantastix.

Lisa shares her love of music with her students at Wheatley School in St. Catharines where she teaches in a Grade 1-2 Montessori classroom. She enjoys listening to and playing music with her husband Ray and son Marcus on a regular basis and currently resides in Beamsville, Ontario. She is delighted to be expanding her musical experience with the Niagara Symphony.
